

SOCIOLOGY, PH.D.

Learning Outcomes

1. Students will be able to apply a breadth and depth of discipline-specific knowledge, major theories and theoretical approaches (a) in the field of sociology overall and (b) in a selected specialty area in written, oral and digital formats.
2. Students will demonstrate an understanding and ability to use advanced Students will be able to utilize advanced statistical tools and a range of research methods, including but not limited to methods such as advanced causal modeling techniques, survey research, experimental methods, qualitative methods.
3. Students will be able to demonstrate preparedness for active professional involvement in the discipline, including knowledge of the job market for Sociologists and interviewing skills.
4. Students will develop professional teaching skills at the collegiate level.