NEUROSCIENCE MINOR

The Neuroscience minor is designed for students going into graduate studies in neuroscience, animal behavior, psychology or medicine. Students develop a strong background of how the nervous system works, from the social and behavioral to the cellular and molecular levels. Beyond core requirements, students may focus on topics of specific interest in the very broad field of neuroscience. Research experience in neuroscience is required, and students must apply to be accepted to the neuroscience minor.